5) 早在战国时期，人们就发现了磁力，并用磁石制造了世界上最早的指南针。汉朝时期，人们制造了一种形如勺子的指南针。这是一个磁石制的勺子，勺子底很平滑，置于一个四方形的铜盘上。盘子中心很光滑，因此勺子可以很容易地转动。勺子停止转动后，勺柄所指的方向就是南方。这种指南针在宋朝时期得到了改进。人们制造了铁针，把这些铁针在一块磁石上摩擦，使他们具有磁性。然后将他们用一根细线吊起来，或是将他们置于一些可以漂浮在一碗水上的轻物体上。后来，这种用法首先在航海中使用。中国是第一个在海船上使用指南针的国家。

People discovered magnetism and invented the earliest compass with the magnetic stone as early as the Warring States Time. In the Han Dynasty, they invented a compass in the shape of a spoon. This is a magnet-made spoon/ladle 长柄勺, with a smooth subface, and is placed on a squared copper tray. The center of the tray is so smooth that the spoon can easily rotate. When it stops, the direction of the spoon handle is just the south. This kind of compass was improved in the Song Dynasty. People invented iron needles and rub them against a magnet to equip them with magnetism. Then the needles were hung up by a thread or placed upon a light object that can float over a bowl of water. This method was applied firstly in navigation later on. China is the first country to use compass on the ship.

The culture of tea in China boasts a profound and enduring legacy. Lu Yu, revered as the Sage of Tea during the Tang Dynasty, authored The Classic of Tea—the world's first comprehensive encyclopedia on tea. By the Song Dynasty, tea had become a universal beverage, with teahouses lining the streets of cities and villages alike. This era also gave rise to a culture of tea poetry, tea paintings, and tea ceremonies, all deeply rooted in daily life.

During the Ming Dynasty, the practice of roasting and brewing loose-leaf tea gained prominence. The Qing Dynasty witnessed the refinement of tea processing techniques, giving birth to the distinct varieties of green tea, black tea, oolong tea, yellow tea, dark tea, and white tea. Across millennia, tea has remained a timeless vessel of the Chinese spirit—imbued with an enduring passion for life.

China's tea culture has since intertwined with and influenced the beverage traditions of other nations, fostering a shared global exchange of humanity and heritage

China's tea culture boasts a rich heritage. /Tea culture in China has a long history.
housewives sub-district profound / time-honored enduring

Lu Yu, the Tea Saint,/ the Sage of Tea, wrote The Classic of Tea, the first encyclopedia about tea in the Tang Dynasty.

In the Song Dynasty, tea became a public beverage.

Tea houses and tea stores were found throughout cities and countryside. This folk reverence for tea also gave birth to a unique cultural landscape, with tea poetry, tea paintings and the art of tea taking center stage.

(By the Song Dynasty, tea had become a popular national beverage. Teahouses were widespread in urban and rural areas, and a unique cultural landscape related to tea emerged in popular culture, including tea poetry....)

The Ming Dynasty witnessed/saw the development from hand roasted tea leaves to loose tea for brewing. During the Qing Dynasty, tea making advanced further, and new processing methods were created for green tea, black tea, oolong tea, yellow tea, dark tea, and white tea.

To this day, tea has offered unfailing nutrition to every aspect of the nation's zest/love/passion for life for thousands of years. The interflow and mutual impact of Chinese tea culture and the beverage traditions of other nations has fostered global cultural exchanges.

"Plucking chrysanthemums by the eastern fence," here, one could indeed "gaze leisurely upon the southern hills." Changing "south" to "west" or "north" would hardly matter. (Lao She: Longing for Beiping)

5. 回到旅馆，在沐浴后上床的时候，从远处的黑暗中传来了阵阵的犬吠声。古人说，深夜犬吠若豹。（季羨林：《加德满都的狗》）

Back at the inn, as I lay in bed after bathing, distant barks echoed through the night. The ancients said, "A dog's midnight howl resembles a leopard's roar." (Ji Xianlin: The Dogs of Kathmandu)

信阳楚简

Xinyang Chu Bamboo Slips

在河南信阳出土的战国时期楚简，是迄今发现最早的简牍之一，这一时期的简牍文字是中国目前发现的最早用毛笔和黑墨为书写工具的文字，蕴藏巨大的书法艺术价值。

Unearthed in Xinyang, Henan, these Warring States-era Chu bamboo slips are among the earliest discovered in China. The script, written with brush and ink, represents one of the oldest forms of Chinese calligraphy, holding immense artistic and historical significance.

中国民族自古以来从不把人看作高于一切，在哲学文艺方面的表现都反映出人在自然界中与万物占着一个比例较为恰当的地位，而非绝对统治万物的主宰。因此我们的苦闷，基本上比西方人为少为小；因为苦闷的强弱原是随欲望的大小而转移的。农业社会的人比工业社会的人享受差得多，因此欲望也小得多。况中国古代素来以不滞于物，不为物役为最主要的人生哲学。并非我们没有守财奴，但比莫里哀与巴尔扎克笔下的守财奴与野心家来，就小巫见大巫了。中国民族多数是性情中正和平、淡泊、朴实，比西方人容易满足。

The Chinese people are characterized by moderation, peacefulness, insecularness, plainness, and easier to get satisfied than westerners.
